SAT PREPARATION COURSE

The SAT is one of the most crucial exams a high school student takes. The Teacher Institute of Lower Westchester uses highly qualified, certified mathematics and English teachers to deliver a comprehensive review program that gives test takers the tools they need to achieve success on the exam.

To prepare for the Exam, students will take two practice exams, under test-taking conditions, and receive a detailed item analysis. The item analysis will help students to better understand their strengths and identify areas where improvements can be made. Students will also receive 18 hours of direct instruction on the following skills:

- How to approach the exam
- Test-taking strategies
- Pacing techniques
- How the test is scored
- Common SAT traps to avoid
- Reading comprehension skills
- Techniques for improving vocabulary usage
- Elements of a strong essay
- Basic grammar needed for success
- Mathematics content
- Mathematics problem solving skills
- Reasoning skills
- Additional mathematics formulas that are not provided on the SAT

No federal, state, or local monies are used to fund the courses offered.

ABOUT THE INSTRUCTORS

Ruth Kambar has been teaching English for more than 20 years and is passionate about fiction and poetry. She runs both the poetry club and writing workshops.

Ron Hattar is the Supervisor of Mathematics for the Eastchester School District. Mr. Hattar holds teaching certifications in mathematics and special education. He has taught all levels of mathematics ranging from 7th grade to Calculus. Mr. Hattar also serves as the District Representative for Westchester County for the Association of Mathematics teachers of New York State.

Other review companies charge upwards of $1,200 for comparable programs that are often taught by non-certified teachers who are unfamiliar with our student population and the English and math curricula in Westchester schools.
